5. If two decoupling capacitors are placed in parallel, the increase in capacitance (total) would have no effect. However, the parallel inductance of the equivalent capacitor (both in parallel) would be half the original, leading to a more stable voltage at Vdd pin. This is a very common solution to difficult to decouple IC's.