

BI103 Spring 2024

Life Artifacts

Like many, I don't recall my infancy. There are however many memorabilia so to speak about this time of my life. From toys which hang in the crib or rattles for entertainment, the pair of shoes my first steps were taken in, the first large stuffed animal I became attached to and took everywhere, these objects represent the infancy I had. I am glad my parents decided to store these items instead of throwing or gifting them away, because in the present day they are evidence of, well, my infancy. Photos are good to store memories, but nothing beats having actual, physical objects from this time period.